Hello Friends,
The 70th Olympic Day celebrations saw Hockey India and its Member Units come together in unison to find innovative ways to spread the spirit of sportsmanship. Hockey, being one of the most decorated Olympic sports in the country, has always engaged in activities which involve the players, coaches and officials from throughout the nation to celebrate and honour the qualities of sportsmanship, respect, and camaraderie.

The tribute to the International Olympic Day saw a total of 47 Member Units organise and support sporting activities, exhibitions, music, educational seminars and quizzes in order to further instil the spirit of the Olympic Games into all the participants. The Olympic Day was introduced in 1948 to commemorate the birth of the modern Olympic Games which were first held on June 23, 1894 at the Sorbonne in Paris.

These celebrations were held with the aim to show unity through sport, where thousands of hockey lovers were brought together regardless of their gender, background and athletic ability. The celebrations also included matches and tournaments being conducted for both men and women at various districts of various member units. Through these tournaments, the member units promoted the benefits of physical exercise, inspiring people to get active and embrace the Olympic ideals regardless of age, gender or athletic ability.

The overwhelming response from all our Member Units who engaged in innovative activities was great to see and we endorsed IOC’s campaign called ‘UnitedBy’ that champions to bring together stories, experiences and events of Olympism from across the sporting world. Olympism is a philosophy of life which, with the help of sport, culture and educate, enlightens an athlete to have the qualities of body, will and mind. We, at Hockey India, are proud to have organised the Olympic Day celebrations and would like continue to further promote the spirit of sportsmanship.

You had to be a brave little girl if you wanted to play hockey in Shahabad, the town where I grew up.
The region, itself, is a hub for young and budding hockey players. Many from the village have made it to the national team.
Everyone loved hockey.
But, it was still a "man's" game.
You know what my neighbours used to say while smirking at me? What they used to tell my parents?
"Don't send your girl to play hockey. It is not for young girls."
"A girl? On the hockey field? Are you mad?"
I still don't understand why this discrimination was there. Sports should be practiced without discrimination of any kind, that is the only way the youth can be taught to contribute to building a peaceful and better world.
My parents too were apprehensive about me playing hockey back then. My father used to tell me, "Concentrate on studies, you don't need to play hockey." I was six at that time.
Perhaps, they were afraid something might happen to their little girl.
But the little girl knew only one thing -- hockey.
You had to be a brave little girl if you wanted to play hockey in Shahabad.
My father was a cart-puller. He had to look after a family of six. We lived in a small house which had only two rooms. Whenever it rained, water used to enter our house. Naturally, it was very difficult at times.
Believe me, I had known poverty.
I often feared, will my parents be able to afford to let me play hockey for a living? Thankfully, my coach and my senior players guided me and supported me through that time.

I started playing under Baldev Singh, who later went on to win the Dronacharya Award. The first time I went to his academy, he rejected me.
"You are too young and small. Come back in one or two years. I'll take you under my wing then," he said.
When I went back after a couple of years, he told me, "You are too weak and fragile. You need to become stronger." But this time, I would not move an inch. Seeing my insistence and determination, he finally relented and inducted me into his academy.
Most of the time, I was playing with players who were much senior to me. I was a little frail. So, obviously, I would get bullied, physically, on the pitch. I just did not have the strength to take on the much bigger players.
There was only one thing I could do, beat them with my skill. For this, I practised for days and for hours. I never stopped.
When I was about 13, I was in the junior team camp but I got injured and had to leave.
"You are not eligible for the camp. There is no chance you would ever make the Indian team," they told me.
A year later, I made my debut for the senior national team at the Champions Challenge tournament in Pakistan.
Before that, I was in the team during the 2008 Olympic qualification phase. But I was so young, I had no idea what the Olympics were, and why it was such a big fuss. I was playing for fun.
After one of the games, I noticed all the senior players were crestfallen, some of them were even crying. "Are they crying?" I asked.
I was so naive. I did not know not qualifying for the Olympics was a crime. I did not know what it meant to play in the Olympics. I used to think that women's hockey is not a part of the Olympics. Maybe, it was because the Indian women's team never played in the Olympics.
At that time, I just wanted to play for India. I just wanted to play alongside the seniors and learn as much as possible from them.
I remember one particular incident very distinctly. We had just lost to USA 4-0. After the match, Suman Bala, one of the most experienced players in the team, was sitting beside me. The players of the USA team were passing by us.
"Did you see how they played? Four years from now, you have to play like this," she told me, pointing towards the USA players.
I did not have any clue why she said that... I did not get the four-years reference.
At such a young age, when you fail to win anything major, you start feeling like your career is over. "Why am I still playing?" I asked myself repeatedly.
At one time, I did not even know what it meant to be an Olympian. We were going through a tough time when I started playing for India. We failed to bag a medal at the 2010 Commonwealth Games at home. We also failed to finish on the podium at the 2010 Asian Games.
But then, I started dreaming of qualifying for the Olympics.
Dreams are funny things, aren't they? Because I was so young and naive, I believed that 2012 would be my only chance... I cannot simply afford to lose. I was remembering those words about 'playing like them in four years' time'.
However, again, we lost to South Africa 3-1 in the final and failed to book a place at the London Games. I was heartbroken. The entire night, I cried. I cried, sitting outside my hotel room, alone.
That's when I understood why four years ago everyone was crying. That's when I realised the importance of playing at the Olympics, how much hard work one needs to put in to even be there.
I even considered giving up the sport. But, at the same time, I refused to give up on my dream... One day, I will play such a match.
Then, the 2013 Junior World Cup gave me a much-needed boost. Winning the best player of the tournament award gave me confidence and motivation to do better, to do more. A bronze at the Asian Games, next year, gave me a further push.
